The most controversial book of our time

On January 22 the Sunday Times begins serialisation of the most controversial book of our time . . . William Manchester's THE DEATH OF A PRESIDENT.

It throws new light on President Kennedy and his wife Jacqueline, on President Johnson, on Lee Harvey Oswald, the assassin. Events during the six days surrounding the murder of the President on November 22, 1963, are examined in meticulous detail. The reverberations of the book may be profound.

To try to meet the demand—which seems likely to be overwhelming—the print order for the Sunday Times of January 22 is to be substantially increased.